

The TT100 Business Innovation Awards 2017 that took place in Johannesburg, South Africa on Wednesday, 15 November 2017 saw South Africa's most innovative companies recognised for being role models in the management of innovation and technology. These companies have demonstrated their excellence in co-creating new workplace realities.

The recipients of the awards demonstrated excellence in the management of technology, innovation, people, and systems. This is based on The Da Vinci Institute's trademarked TIPS framework.

The TT100 Awards participants receive intensive, customised feedback on how they manage technology, innovation, people and systems, enabling them to improve the way they operate their organisations.

The TT100 Award for Excellence in the management of people emerging enterprise went to This is Me, small enterprise award went to X/procure software, medium went to BCX Accsys, and the large enterprise award went to Nelito systems.

Dr Jan Bosman part of Faculty, Mr Satish Roopa Law Representative on council, Teryl Schroenn Accsys CEO and Prof Bennie Anderson